

Roberto Urbani

Robeto Urbani is a PhD candidate in Management at Luiss Guido Carli University and Postdoctoral Research at Campus Bio-Medico University of Rome. He has a Bachelor in Economics and Master in Management, Economics and Finance at the University of L'Aquila.

He has teaching experience in undergraduate, graduate and postgraduate studies at the Luiss Guido Carli University, Luiss School of Government and L'Aquila University in the subjects of Organizing Innovation, Interorganizational Networks and Relational Economics.

As researcher he specializes in issues related to the Innovation Management (open innovation, industrial policy for innovation and structural networks for innovation).

He has published a paper and several working papers with different co-authors.

Biggiero L. and Urbani R. (2022). "Testing the convergence hypothesis. A longitudinal analysis of the world trade web through social network analysis". Journal of Economic Interaction and Coordination. DOI: 10.1007/s11403-021-00341-6

He has participated in several international conferences as presenter, has received funds for competitive national research projects and was visiting scholar at the Simon Fraser University in Vancouver (Canada).

He is member of the Integrated Research Center (I.R.C.) at Campus Bio-Medico University, and Research laboratory on globalization, innovation and local development (GISLAB) at University of L'Aquila.