

Lorenzo Moretti

Lorenzo is a public policy expert with a hybrid background in academia, government, and the private sector. His expertise spans finance, innovation policy, and Italian political economy. Throughout his career, he has worked in management consulting, private equity, and venture capital in the US and in the UK, as well as at Italy's National Innovation Fund. In his last role, Lorenzo was policy coordinator for Italy's Minister of Technological Innovation and Digital Transition during Mario Draghi's government. He holds an honours degree from Brown University in economics and political science and is completing a PhD at the University of Oxford on innovation industrial policy in Europe.