

Daniele Archibugi

Daniele Archibugi is a Research Director at the Italian National Research Council at Irpps-Cnr in Rome, Professor of Innovation, Governance and Public Policy at the University of London, Birkbeck Business School and Member of the Academic Board of the Venice International University. He graduated from Sapienza University of Rome with Federico Caffè and obtained his Doctor of Philosophy from the Universities of Sussex where he worked with Christopher Freeman and Keith Pavitt. He has taught at the Universities of Cambridge, London School of Economics, Harvard, Universidad Autonoma de Madrid, Universidad Complutense de Madrid and Luiss. He is Honorary Professor of the University of Sussex and Honorary Member of the French Research Network on Innovation.

He works on economics and policy of science, technology and on the political theory of international relations. He has written on the globalization of technology, the theory and measurement of innovation, the international division of competences in science and technology, and the impact of innovation on economic cycles. He has led and participated in several international projects on science and technology policy promoted by the European Commission and by other international organizations.