Lauro Panella

Lauro Panella is currently Economic Advisor at the Cabinet of the President of the European Council. After entering the European Commission in 2005 as an economist, he covered several roles related to the European Semester and Member States Competitiveness, Industrial Policy and Internal Market. From 2012 to 2014, he was Member of Cabinet/Economic Adviser to the Commissioner Vice President for Industry and Entrepreneurship Antonio Tajani and Ferdinano Nelli Feroci. From 2017 to 2019, he served as Economic Adviser to the President of the European Parliament Antonio Tajani. He was then Head of the European Added Value Unit at the Research Service of the European Parliament. A graduate of the University of Naples Federico II and postgraduate at Bocconi University, Milan, his most recent publications are "Ten ways that Europe could do more for you - Mapping the cost of non-Europe", published in February 2024, and "Increasing European Added Value: Mapping the Cost of non-Europe 2022-2032", published in February 2023.